MABRA LAW TO SPONSOR KEITH DUNCAN'S "BATTLE OF THE BANDS" EXHIBIT AT CHICK-FIL-A COLLEGE FOOTBALL HALL OF FAME

Vibrant Visual Art Series Celebrates 15 Legendary HBCU Marching Bands

ATLANTA, GA., AUGUST 4, 2026 – Atlanta-based personal injury boutique Mabra Law is proud to present Keith Duncan's "Battle of the Bands" exhibit, opening August 28 at the Chick-fil-A College Football Hall of Fame.

New Orleans-based artist Keith Duncan's work is inspired by his personal experience, community engagement, current events and Black culture. "Battle of the Bands" is a large-scale fabric painting series that vibrantly captures the artistry, energy and joy behind 15 iconic HBCU marching band programs. They include Howard University's "Showtime," Florida A & M's "Marching 100," Jackson State's "Sonic Boom of the South" and Southern University's "Human Jukebox." The series is located adjacent to the Southern Company's Celebrating Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) exhibit.

"Mabra Law has a long history of supporting football, the arts and the tradition of HBCUs," said Ronnie Mabra, firm founder and managing partner. "All three are baked into our DNA. We are honored to be able to present this culturally significant collection in our hometown."

Before he played football for Georgia Tech, Mabra was recruited by Howard University. Three generations of Mabra's family – his grandfather, father and sister – attended Howard. His father, former Atlanta Falcon Ron Mabra Sr., played football and was inducted into Howard University's Athletics Hall of Fame. Ronnie's sister, Brittany Mabra Collins, was a cheerleader and, later, the cheerleading coach there.

On August 29, the day after the exhibit opens, Alabama A&M and Howard University will play in the MEAC/SWAC Kickoff Challenge at Center Parc Stadium in Atlanta.
